Halifax House Price Index

National Index

March 2007

All Houses, All Buyers Index (1983=100)

Index (seasonally adjusted) 629.1 Monthly Change 1.0% Annual Change 11.1%

Standardised Average Price (seasonally adjusted) £194,362

Key Points

- House prices rose by 1.0% in March, the second smallest monthly increase since August 2006.
- Overall, house prices increased by 2.8% in 2007 Q1, well below the 4.2% rise in 2006 Q4.
- The annual rate of house price growth has risen to 11.1% for purely arithmetic reasons, reflecting the strength of the housing market in early 2006. House price inflation should settle in coming months, given that recent conditions have been more subdued.
- House prices increased in all regions during 2007 Q1. The biggest price rises were in Scotland (7.5%), the South West (5.4%) and Wales (4.9%). The smallest increases were in the East Midlands (0.2%) and Yorkshire and the Humber (0.6%).
- The average price in Northern Ireland broke through the £200,000 barrier for the first time in 2007 Q1 (£206,495). Northern Ireland is now one of the most expensive parts of the UK with only London, the South East and South West having higher average house prices. Two years ago, Scotland was the only part of the UK with lower average house prices than Northern Ireland.
- Over the past year, house prices have risen most rapidly in Northern Ireland (37.0%) and Scotland (22.4%). Greater London (14.9%) has recorded the biggest increase in prices in England. The smallest annual price rises have been in the North (5.6%) and the East Midlands (5.8%).
- Sound economic fundamentals, combined with a shortage of both new house building and second hand properties for sale, continue to drive house prices up. New official household projections suggest that the shortfall in new homes being built is more acute than previously estimated. Nonetheless, the three quarter point interest rate rises since last summer, together with negative real earnings growth and above inflation council tax increases, are expected to curb housing demand, resulting in slower house price growth over the coming months.

Commenting, Tim Crawford, group economist, said:

"House prices rose by 1.0% in March, the second smallest monthly increase in prices since last August. Prices continue to rise in a tight market but there are emerging signs that pressure on householders' finances, partly due to the rise in interest rates since last summer, are dampening housing demand with evidence of reduced market activity.

We expect the recent rises in interest rates, negative real earnings growth and above inflation council tax bill increases to lead to slower house price growth over the coming months. Sound economic fundamentals and an ongoing shortage of housing supply will, however, continue to support house prices."

House prices rise most rapidly in Scotland in 2007 Q1

House prices increased in all regions during 2007 Q1. The biggest price rises were in Scotland (7.5%), South West (5.4%) and Wales (4.9%). The smallest increases were in the East Midlands (0.2%) and Yorkshire and the Humber (0.6%).

Average price in Northern Ireland rises above £200,000

The average price in Northern Ireland broke through the £200,000 barrier for the first time in 2007 Q1 to £206,495. Northern Ireland is now one of the most expensive parts of the UK; only London, the South East and the South West have higher average house prices. Two years ago, Scotland was the only part of the UK with lower average house prices than Northern Ireland.

A strong local economy, high levels of immigration and high demand for properties from second homebuyers and buy-to-let investors in the Republic of Ireland have significantly boosted property prices in Northern Ireland over the past few years. As a result, the average house price in Northern Ireland has increased by 76% since 2005 Q1, far outstripping the UK average gain of 18%.

Average price in North West breaks £150,000 barrier

The average price in the North West rose above £150,000 for the first time in 2007 Q1 to £151,341. Scotland, Yorkshire & the Humber and the North are the only parts of the UK where average prices remain below £150,000.

London has recorded the biggest price rises in England over the past year.....

House prices have risen most rapidly in Northern Ireland (37.0%) and Scotland (22.4%) over the past year. Greater London (14.9%) has recorded the biggest increase in prices in England. The smallest price rises have been in the North (5.6%) and the East Midlands (5.8%).

North/south divide re-emerges in England.....

A north/south divide in England has re-emerged over the past year with the most rapid price rises in London, the South West and the South East as house price inflation has accelerated in these regions. By contrast, house price inflation has eased across northern England with house price inflation in single digits in the three northern English regions over the past 12 months.

Further signs that housing market activity is easing.....

There has been further evidence that housing market activity is slowing over the past month. The number of mortgage approvals to fund house purchase in the three months to February was 7% lower than in the preceding quarter, according to the Bank of England. The latest RICS monthly survey showed that new buyer enquiries continued to fall in February, whilst newly agreed sales dropped for the first time since June 2005.

Economic fundamentals are sound and supply shortages remain.....

A robust economy and strong labour market continue to underpin healthy housing demand. Gross domestic product (GDP) is confirmed to have grown at above its long-term average pace in the final quarter of 2006 (source: ONS) with a 0.7% increase. The UK economy has now seen 58 consecutive quarters of economic growth, the longest unbroken stretch on record. The number of people in employment has increased by 221,000 over the past year with a further rise of 18,000 in the three months to January compared with the previous quarter.

Sound economic fundamentals, combined with a shortage of both new housebuilding and secondhand properties for sale, continue to drive house prices up. New official household projections suggest that the shortfall in new homes being built is more acute than previously estimated with the number of new households in England projected at 223,000 per year over the next twenty years, compared with earlier forecasts of 209,000 per year. The projected annual increase of 223,000 households compares with 160,000 homes built in England in 2006.

But pressures on householders' finances should cause house price inflation to moderate

The three quarter point interest rates rises since last summer, together with negative real earnings growth and above inflation council tax increases, are expected to curb housing demand, resulting in moderation in house price inflation over the coming months.

NOTE: The 11.1% number is the quarterly year-on-year figure. This figure provides a much better picture of underlying trends compared to a monthly year-on-year number as it smoothes out any short-term fluctuations.

HBOS 2007 AGM Trading Statement

The following is an extract from the statement made by Andy Hornby, Chief Executive of HBOS plc, at the company's AGM held today, 25th April 2007, in Brighton:-

"HBOS has made a good start to the year.

At this early stage in 2007, we are confident of delivering underlying earnings per share ahead of the current market consensus of 107.4p.

In Retail, we are enjoying good growth in savings and banking products, whilst maintaining our relative caution in unsecured lending.

In mortgages, as previously indicated, the timing of cessations in our book points to a first half net lending share below our normal 15%-20% range, with a return to this range in the second half of the year.

Corporate trading in both the UK and in Europe is strong with originations again exceeding asset retentions.

As in previous results, the contribution from realised gains, dividends, JVs and associates is expected to add incremental and sustainable value to a strong operating performance.

Our Insurance & Investment businesses continue to make good progress.

In Investment, we expect to deliver good double digit sales growth year-on-year. In Insurance, we have seen good growth in policy volumes, particularly in household, despite continued market pricing pressures.

Our International business volumes have made a good start to the year with very encouraging growth in both lending and deposit taking, and the continued development of our commercial banking and retail interests in Australia and Ireland.

Overall, the outlook for the credit environment remains robust and as previously guided.

We continue to generate surplus capital, which we return to shareholders, with share buybacks for the 2007 programme progressing well and currently totalling £200m.

Trading so far this year across the breadth of the business confirms our confidence that 2007 will be another good year for sustainable value creation for shareholders of HBOS."

This document contains forward-looking statements, including such statements within the meaning of section 27A of the US Securities Act of 1933 and section 21E of the US Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

These statements concern or may affect future matters. These may include HBOS's future strategies, business plans, and results and are based on the current expectations of the directors of HBOS. They are subject to a number of risks and uncertainties that might cause actual results and outcomes to differ materially from expectations outlined in these forward-looking statements. These factors are not limited to regulatory developments but include stock markets, IT developments, and competitive and general operating conditions.
